

Figure 2a. The non-nutritive suck typically consists of a series of compression bursts and pause intervals. Each burst typically consists of several suck cycles that decelerate in rate over the first five cycles until a steady state of approximately 2 Hz is achieved (y-axis expressed in cm H<sub>2</sub>O, x-axis shows digitized sample number).